I have a css class that's simply an image with a background and a css rule for it. How can I add a font-family to the image? Example: CSS .news-img { height: 230px; width: 187px; border: 1px solid #999; background: url(..images/bg.jpg); background-repeat: no-repeat; background-size: cover; font-family: "Agency FB"; } HTML A: You can use one of these two methods Use a more specific selector (class selector) than the normal Selector [attribute="value"] Note, in order to use a class selector, you must add a space between the "." and the selector. Like so: .MyClassName { font-family: "Agency FB"; } Use the!important flag to override a previously declared rule. Add!important at the end of a class selector. Add!important at the end of the.news-img rule .news-img { height: 230px; width: 187px; border: 1px solid #999; background: url(..images/bg.jpg); background-repeat: no-repeat; background-size: cover; font-family: "Agency FB"; font-family: "Agency FB!important
